Negotiations Begin on Government Funding

Lawmakers on Capitol Hill have begun negotiations on a legislative option to avoid another partial government shutdown. The 17 conferees charged with reaching a deal met for the first time last week, but measurable progress has yet to be made. Nevertheless, the lawmakers, led by Senate Appropriations Chairman Richard Shelby (R-Ala.) and Ranking Member Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) and House Appropriations Chairwoman Nita Lowey (D-N.Y.) and Ranking Member Kay Granger (R-Texas), have stated that they are optimistic they will reach a compromise.

There was no additional border wall money in the Democrat’s opening offer, but their proposal did include funding for new customs officers and ports of entry technology. President Trump has threatened another government shutdown if the final plan does not include adequate money for a border wall; he is also considering declaring a state of emergency in an attempt to circumvent Congress to build the wall. The President has already said that he does not expect the final compromise to contain sufficient border wall funding.

Funding for agencies impacted by the 35-day partial government shutdown will lapse again on Feb. 16 unless a new spending agreement is reached.

SOTU Scheduled for Feb. 5

President Trump and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) reached agreement to hold the State of the Union address in the House chamber on Feb. 5. Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) announced that Stacey Abrams, who ran for governor last year in Georgia, will give the Democratic response to the President’s speech. Abrams previously served as the Democratic leader of the Georgia General Assembly.

House Dems Investigate Insulin Pricing

Energy and Commerce Committee Democrats have opened an investigation into insulin pricing practices. Committee Chairman Frank Pallone (D-N.J.) and Investigations Subcommittee Chairwoman Diana DeGette (D-Colo.) have written to the three main manufacturers of insulin in the U.S. – Eli Lilly, Novo Nordisk, and Sanofi – requesting information about average prices, net profits, and any changes made to products. According to the letter, the cost of insulin nearly tripled between 2002 and 2013, and almost doubled between 2012 and 2016. The lawmakers ask the companies if they have attempted to keep generic versions of the products off the market. They request a response by Feb. 13.

Trump Administration Proposes Changes to the Rebate Program

The Trump administration has proposed a change to the prescription drug rebate system. The proposed rule from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) would eliminate the antikickback safe harbor for rebates negotiated between pharmaceutical manufacturers and pharmacy benefit managers (PBMs). In its place, HHS proposes two new and narrower antikickback safe harbors with the intent to encourage manufacturers to offer discounts directly to patients at the point-of-sale. The proposal was not well-received by Democrats. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) expressed concerns that the policy would put most Medicare beneficiaries at risk of higher premiums and out-of-pocket (OOP) costs. Democratic leadership of the House Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce committees also expressed opposition to the rule, arguing that it will increase government spending by $200 billion. HHS has stated that premium increases resulting from the proposal will be offset by lower OOP spending on high-cost drugs.

Bipartisan Value-Based Payment Legislation Introduced

Sens. Bill Cassidy (R-La.) and Mark Warner (D-Va.) have released draft legislation that aims to lower drug prices through the use of value-based payment. The Patient Affordability, Value, and Efficiency Act would tie prescription drug and medical device prices to the product's clinical effectiveness. The bill would create carve outs for these new payment models from certain anti-kickback and physician self-referral laws, which some argue inhibit the move toward value-based care. Sens. Cassidy and Warner are requesting feedback on the draft by Feb. 19. Submissions should be emailed to paveact@cassidy.senate.gov and paveact@warner.senate.gov.

Medicare for All Hearings, Legislation Expected Soon

House Democrats plan to begin hearings on 'Medicare for All' proposals this month, with the goal of passing legislation to expand the program by the end of next year, according to House Budget Committee Chairman John Yarmuth (D-Ky.). Yarmuth believes that the most feasible path would be to allow individuals age 50 or 55 and above to enroll in the program. Medicare eligibility currently begins at age 65. He hopes that congressional hearings will more clearly define the concept of Medicare for All, help develop a framework for legislation, and determine what proposals are possible from a financial perspective.

Rep. Pramila Jayapal (D-Wash.) has said that Democrats plan to introduce a bill this month, with committee hearings beginning in March. While she has the support of Chairman Yarmuth to hold a Medicare for All hearing before the Budget Committee, she has yet to receive commitments to explore the idea from panels with health jurisdiction – the House Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce committees.

HELP Considers Community Health Center Reauthorization

The Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions (HELP) Committee is working to provide for a five-year extension of funding for the nation's community health centers. HELP considered the bipartisan reauthorization legislation (S. 192) authored by Chairman Lamar Alexander (R-Tenn.) and Ranking Member Patty Murray (D-Wash.) during a congressional hearing last week. The bill would provide $4 billion per year to the Community Health Center program; the National Health Service Corps (NHSC); the Teaching Health Center Graduate Medical Education program; the Special Diabetes Program at the National Institutes of Health (NIH); and the Special Diabetes Program for Indians before current funding expires Sept. 30.

WH to Miss Budget Deadline

The White House will not meet the official deadline for sending the President's budget proposal, according to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). By law, the President is required to release his budget proposal by the first Monday in February, but the White House is currently working on a revised schedule due to the furloughing of many OMB staff during the recent partial government shutdown.

VA Releases Proposed Standards for Community Care

The Department of Veterans Affairs has released a proposed document containing new access standards for community and urgent care. The standards, which seek to implement the VA MISSION Act, would expand eligibility to community care for veterans who are not within a 30-minute drive of a VA medical facility. Veterans previously had to be more than 40 miles from a VA facility to qualify for subsidized private care. If the wait time for an appointment is more than 20 days for primary or mental health care services, veterans will be permitted to seek private health care services. Previous rules required a 30 day wait time. According to the Department, the new standards will increase the number of community care-eligible veterans from eight percent to between 20 and 30 percent. The new standards are expected to be implemented in June and incur an additional cost of $1.1 billion in fiscal year (FY) 2019. While the changes were applauded by Republican lawmakers for better meeting the needs of veterans, Democrats expressed concern about the increased privatization of VA health care and the projected cost of the changes coming at the expense of internal VA medical services.
